One day to go! Sponsors speak out on Toto fest

By Ashraf Kasirye

With just one day to the Toto Christmas Festival on Sunday, preparations of the venue at the Nelson Mandela National Stadium in Namboole are in high gear.

More sponsors have since revealed why they believe that the annual event organised by Vision Group is a niche market.

Jesa

Geoffrey Mulwana, the managing director of Jesa, said the reason their company is taking part in this event is to interact with their customers.

"We shall have many goodies to give back to the community and also provide information about Jesa products to our customers," he said.

The company will showcase a new product, Jesa Tropical Delight, which is a blend of dairy and fruity flavours. It is like a juice, but it has more nutritional value.

Mulwana, who is also a parent, says: "Children derive great joy and happiness from spending time with their parents doing fun activities. Toto Christmas Festival has presented such an opportunity. Grab it."

Movit

The public relations manager of Movit, Robert Kitenda, says the company is happy to be part of the sponsors of this year's Toto Christmas Festival.

"On December 10, Movit will officially unveil 'Baby Ndunya.' Get ready to take photographs together with him. The public has been yearning to see what the real 'Baby Ndunya' looks like since we started using

Jude Colour Solutions

The head of sales at Jude Colour Solutions, Henry Zzimbe, says he will not forget the time one of his children reminded him of one of the few times he ever took him out. The excitement on the boy's face was unforgettable.

He encourages parents to spare time for their children and surprise them with little gifts and outings.

"At Jude Color Solutions, we make branded watches, cups, plates, bags, clothes and shoes. The items can be designed with photos of parents or children, according to the wish of the client. We shall be branding gifts on Sunday. So, parents can come with pictures of their choice and we put them on the gifts. These can be a perfect Christmas gift for a loved one," Zzimbe said.

"Our tent will have a variety of goodies to be won by children who will take part in the different games," he added.
