in a Subaru N11. His first national title 10 years ago came in Lubega's old Mitsubishi Evo. 4. For now, the comparisons stop there as Lubega's four crowns came in five years including three in a row in 2000-02.

2-0 on aggregate although it was the Khartoum side that dominated proceedings in the game halted for 15 minutes due to a heavy downpour midway through the first half.

And for Villa Technical Director, out skipper, Abdalgabar Nagim's low effort before the game was halted after 24 minutes.

Villa then went ahead soon after resumption when left back Isaac

Villa now host Zanzibar's JKU in the first round with the first leg due on the weekend starting March 11 and the second leg a week later.

meaning only the top 2 ers in the 10 weight categories will reach Rio 2016 in Brazil.

UOC president William Blick (L) hands the lucky youngsters their scholarship money in the presence of their parents last Thursday. PHOTO BY JB SSENKUBUGGE

Iba Mbaye scholarships for Busia duo

Olympics. Simon Mwidu and Patricia Aguti each received &500 (about Shs1.6m) from Uganda Olympic Committee president William Blick.

BY SANDE BASHAIJA
sbashaija@ug.nationmedia.com

KAMPALA. It pays to have a talented child. Wilberforce Namwigala and Teopista Mugala, both peasant parents from Busia, had never touched a dollar bill until last week. They each pocketed $500 (about Shs1.6m) after their children were named beneficiaries of the Iba Mbaye/ World Anti-Doping Association (WADA) Fellowship scheme.

Simon Mwidu, 13, and Patricia Aguti, 14, beat hundreds of other children to secure the funding meant to facilitate their education. Besides excelling in a 3km road race organized by Uganda Olympic Committee (UOC) at the Maj Gen Francis Nyangweso Olympafrica Youth Centre in Busia, the youngsters also proved they are knowledgeable in Olympic Values, computer and WADA programmes.

"My daughter told me they were going to give us dollars but I thought it was a joke. I still can't believe this," Aguti's mother, Teopista Mugala, said after receiving her daughter's prize last Thursday. Wilberforce Namwigala, Mwidu's father, vowed to support his son's sporting career. "I didn't know someone can get such money from sports in Uganda. I am going to use part of this money to buy him sports equipment," Namwigala noted after Uganda Olympic Committee (UOC) president William Blick handed him the cash. Blick cautioned the parents to spend a big chunk of the money on their children's education.

"Please make sure these talented youngsters remain in school. We will try to monitor them and offer support where necessary," note Blick. The duo studies at Busitema College Primary School.

The scholarships, awarded by the Olympafrica International Foundation on a rotational basis, are funded by Senegalese Keba Mbaye, a former International Olympic Committee (IOC) vice-president, and WADA.

Scanned with CamScanner