Residents warned against cervical cancer

The Uganda Cancer Institute (UCI) has warned Kagadi District residents against laxity in testing and screening for cervical cancer. Dr Caroline Nakisinge, a UCI official, said according to latest research, seven women die of cancer every day in Uganda and urged women to go for screening and seek medication if they test positive. She was speaking at the launch of the see and treat cervical cancer project in Kagadi Town Council last Friday. The District Woman MP, Ms Jenifer Mbabazi, urged women to prevent themselves from acquiring the disease. [Alex Tumuhimbise]
