ENTEBBE. The Global Environment Facility has given Uganda and two other countries—Ghana and Mozambique - a $5m (about Shs17.9 billion) grant to help experts disseminate natural resources conservation information to policy makers in a non-technical manner in a pilot project dubbed "Connect".

For four years

The four-year project aims at lobbying governments to conserve natural resources such as water bodies, forests, animals among others, owing to the integral importance they play in daily lives of people.

"It was a privilege to be selected in this pilot project. If we perform well, then Uganda will become a reference point," Mr Edward Okot Omoya, the national project manager, said in Entebbe yesterday.
