The head of laity in Mbarara Archdiocese, Gervase Ndyanabo, has urged parents to invest in the educating of their children.

He cautioned parents against educating some of the children and ignoring others, saying the uneducated children are likely to be a problem to the entire society.

Ndyanabo, who is also the deputy managing director and chief finance officer of Vision Group, was on Sunday addressing parents, students and teachers of St Gozanga Secondary School in Bushenyi district during the celebrations to mark the school day.

a key role in reviving schools' academic standards, saying many schools have relaxed in terms of performance.

"There are many schools which end a year without having any student in any grade," he noted.

This, he said affects the future of the students and wastes parents' resources.

He congratulated St Gozanga on the good performance since inception.

The school director, Bernard Kananura, said their core motive is to produce students who are morally upright, good at academics and God-fearing.

He said discipline among students, teachers and parents is a key foundation for everything.
