New anti-termite product launched

Termite infestation and damage is one of the biggest challenges faced by Ugandans regardless of their stature.

In trying to solve this challenge, Quality Chemicals Uganda in partnership with a Germany based firm, BASF during an event on Friday at Kampala Serena Hotel launched a new product called termidor that is meant to overcome this challenge.

According to Dirk Hartman, the company's business management director, the product is one of a different kind unlike others that would help farmers, builders and people in rural areas avoid infestation of termites.

"When you talk to Ugandans, especially farmers, you realise that they are facing an existential threat to their farming activities," he said.

Dr Chris Baryomunsi, Uganda's state minster for housing, who attended the launch of the product, commended BASF and Quality chemicals for trying to solve one of the biggest farm challenges formation is.

By Eric Kyama

