

Don't prolong unrest in the health sector

The country has witnessed a number of industrial actions by different facets of public servants. The agitations for better pay and working conditions, including by teachers, were resolved through dialogue and promises made by the government.

But of recent, the government seems to be turning a blind eye and give a deaf ear to subsequent strikes by public prosecutors after failing to meet to address their demands in a timely manner. However, the same should not be applied to the ongoing strike by doctors and interns.

I say this because the ongoing sit-down strike by doctors has the potential to cause irreparable damage to the public, especially the inevitable consequence of loss of lives. Health is a fundamental aspect that directly touches on the fundamental right to life.

Life is sacred and thus should be accorded the greatest attention it deserves.
