

Infinity Dance Group spark emotion at gala night

With electrifying dance routines and breathtaking acrobatic displays, the young performers commanded the room, drawing guests into a performance that was as emotional as it was exhilarating.

BY MAXELA MUGISHA

As the sun dipped below the Kampala skyline, the red carpet at Kampala Serena Hotel came alive with elegance, anticipation, and a touch of glamour. By 6pm, guests were already streaming in, dressed to impress and ready for what would unfold as a vibrant and memorable corporate social evening.

This was not just another gala, but a beautifully curated experience where Kansai Plascon blurred the lines between business and celebration. Set under the theme "The Colours of Partnership," the night unfolded like a living canvas, filled with music, movement, connection, and shared joy.

The evening opened into a relaxed cocktail session, where laughter, clinking glasses, and easy conversation created a warm, inviting energy. But it was only the beginning.

The real magic ignited when Infinity Dance Group from Nation Infinity

Uganda took to the stage.

With electrifying dance routines and breathtaking acrobatic displays, the young performers commanded the room, drawing guests into a performance that was as emotional as it was exhilarating. Their energy was infectious, their talent undeniable, and their presence transformed the gala into something far more meaningful than entertainment.

In a spontaneous and heartfelt moment that captured the spirit of the evening, event host Brian Mulondo rallied the room behind the children, turning applause into action.

What followed was a powerful show of generosity, as guests contributed approximately Shs10m towards the Infinity Dance Group's school fees and basic needs, with Kansai Plascon itself leading the charge with a Shs5m contribution, a gesture that set the tone for the giving that followed.

Outside, the sky lit up in a synchronized fireworks display, marking the transition into the main programme with bursts of colour that mirrored the theme of the evening and the collective energy in the room.

While the night leaned heavily into entertainment and celebration, Dr Santosh Gumte, the Plascon managing director, brought a moment of reflection, emphasising that their journey is built on people, diverse partners whose combined strengths continue to shape the company's growth. He underscored the company's commitment to not only expanding the business, but also strengthening relationships and building sustainable value together.

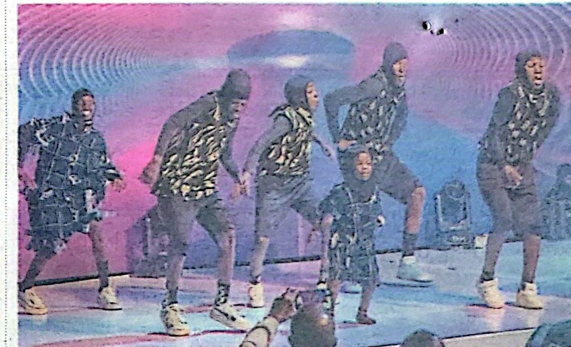

Inside, the night continued to flow effortlessly. Live music, laughter, and a carefully curated dining experience kept guests engaged, while the awards segment added a celebratory highlight, recognising outstanding partners and distributors across the country.

Yet beyond the speeches and accolades, it was the feeling of the evening that lingered; the joy of watching young talent shine, the smiles across tables and the quiet realisation that partnership, at its best, is not just transactional but deeply human.

By the time the night drew to a close, the atmosphere had softened into something almost reflective. Guests stayed a little longer, reluctant to leave a space that had, for a few hours, felt both celebratory and meaningful.

Dr Santosh Gumte, the Plascon managing director at the gala night.

The young dancers received Shs10m in contributions to support their school fees and basic needs. PHOTOS/MAXELA MUGISHA