

I'd rather eat grass than return to my 20s – Prim Nyonyozi

Ever wondered what your favourite people do away from the screen and socials, who they would swap lives with for a day, or which song they secretly dance to? In this section, we get personal and a little nosy with digital content creator Prim Nyonyozi. No filter, no script, just a peek into her quirky side.

Prim dear, now that you are part of the club, is marriage really not a bed of roses?

I am honestly one day old in marriage! So, no comment.

Which individual do you secretly feel dresses like how you would want to dress if that bank account balance was limitless?

Definitely American actress Tracee Ellis Ross.

You survived the 75 days of January. What was your survival tactic that got you through it? Oba you cannot relate?

There was cabbage at home.

Be honest, do you get local politics news from X, WhatsApp groups, or your boda guy?

I get it from different sources other than what you mention. Newspapers.

Without googling, who is the current Inspector General of Government?

Lady Naluzze Aisha Bataala (you have to know who will pick you up).

Is there an old teacher you silently wish watches your social media for them to see how successful you have become?

None whatsoever. They did contribute to everything I am today.

What is one thing about adult friendships you have had to learn on the go?

Forgive, you have been forgiven.

Which Kampala street tests your patience the most?

The area around Kalerwe Market. The market causes traffic, we could build it better and provide ample parking space for shoppers.

You are tasked with planning an ultimate girl's trip for you and your friends. Who is handling the outfit options, and can this writer secretly hope for an invite?

Definitely Maureen Bandari! She will know why. Does the writer plan to host one?

The tie is probably between Munyonyo and Kyanja but where do you think Kampala's biggest red flags reside?

Without a doubt Munyonyo. Suspicion is in the air.

You have a rare opportunity to attend a book launch for Michelle Obama. Is hubby getting the plus one or you are taking one of the girls?

Bless my hubby, that is my gango, he is coming!

We wake up tomorrow, and social media is no more. Brand ogitambuzza otya dear?

Ngenda bawandikira amabaluwa musagga. (I am writing you letters, you dey play!)

Wama are men good people?

Hahahah let us allocate percentage.

Introduce yourself like we are a LinkedIn audience.

Meet Murungi Nyonyozi Primrose, a creative strategist, storyteller, and ecosystem builder shaping how brands and SMEs in Uganda think about influence, money, and meaningful visibility.

Kampala's biggest red flags...without a doubt, reside in Munyonyo. Suspicion is in the air!

If you had chance to roast one influencer, who are you going for and let us see those lines.

No one comes to mind.

Go back to your 20s or eat grass for a month?

Eating grass for a month!

Change a tyre on Entebbe Road or walk from Jinja to Mukono?

I am already changing the tyre as I type this.

You are offered a billboard in Kampala for a week. What are you printing on there?

'No one is coming to save you!'
