

Kaheru, Balamaga win KFN cooking contest

By Nicholas Kajoba

Mark Kaheru and Rogers Balamaga walked away with shm and sh500,000, respectively during the Kampala Food Network (KFN) competition held in Naalya recently.

Balamaga is the Sunday Vision food columnist who has been sharing mouth-watering recipes with our readers for months.

Ugachick partnered with Kampala Food Network to hold a cooking competition dubbed KFN-Ugachick Cook-off. KFN is a closed Facebook group with over 9,000 food enthusiasts who share photos of their culinary exploits.

The competition was open to only the KFN group members.

The competition tasked the chefs to cook Ugachick chicken in the best way they could to impress the judges. The first round saw all the top 10 contestants cook their best chicken meal in 45 minutes and the top five were selected.

Contestants were judged on ingredients used, timing, taste and presentation.

The final five were also given 45 minutes to prepare their final meal and Kaheru merged the overall winner, followed by Balamaga, who came second.

The cook-off was moderated by Vivienne Adala, a renowned chef and Denis Asimwe, a writer and food enthusiast.

Kaheru, Catherine N. (who came in third) and Balamaga