

HEALTH

Management of HIV/AIDS should not make you complacent

In the early days of HIV/AIDS, many people considered having the condition as a death sentence. Some people even went as far as selling their property as soon as they were diagnosed with HIV. However, these days, the story is different.

Thanks to many scientific innovations, people living with HIV/AIDS can now lead normal fulfilling lives, have spouses who are negative and even have babies without HIV. Read today's lead story to learn about the innovations that have been made in the fight against HIV/AIDS and how you can benefit from them. Although such innovations have given us mileage in the fight against HIV/AIDS, we are yet to achieve victory over it. Therefore, I encourage everyone to get on board as we move towards zero new HIV infections, zero deaths and zero discrimination.

Lillian Namusoke Magezi