Dead boy's family demands compensation. The family of Muzamiru Kule, a 13-year-old boy who was shot three times by soldiers at the Kasese Electoral Commission tally centre last week, wants government to compensate them for the loss. Muzamiru was shot during protests over the delay to declare the winners in the Presidential and Parliamentary polls. Government pledged Shs4 million as contribution to the burial. However, the family also wants government to pay compensation for Kule's life according to his father Ali Wabiswa. [Moris Mumbere, Monitor]

Embrace Opposition members, says NRM boss

Advice. Party members told to shun divisionism.

KIRUHURA. NRM party leaders in Kiruhura District have appealed to party members to stop boasting that they are reaping from the government and that those who belong to the Opposition are losing out.

The Kiruhura District NRM party chairperson, Mr Sedrack Nzeire, said though the NRM has won the elections, party members should work for unity and reconciliation for development. "Let us not imitate the UPC twariire (we have eaten) slogan and forget that the development of this country needs all people. Whether NRM or Opposition, we need to get united for the good of our country. I challenge my colleagues in the NRM party that the responsibility they have now is to work for unity of all so as to develop the country," Mr Nzeire said. He was speaking at a victory party organised for President Museveni at Kiruhura District headquarters on Monday.

The Nyabushozi MP Col (rtd) Fred

Mwesigye, echoed the call urging the party members to woo those in the Opposition and work with them.

Ms Sheila Mwiine, the Kiruhura District Woman MP-elect, said elections are full of challenges that make people collide with one another. She called for reconciliation.
