Wishing you happy holidays

As the term comes to an end, make sure you do not relax because the journey to success still continues.

Always remember the reason as to why you are in school. This will lead you to what your aspirations are and what you hope to achieve.

The greatest distraction in education is peer pressure because this will influence you to do things that will distract you from your academics and you end up in trouble which will disrupt your studies.

Take your time in everything you do but make sure that at the end of it all, you will succeed.

Read so hard for your forthcoming examinations so that you perform well and are promoted to the next class.

Continue being the good pupils that you have been until we resume NiE next term.

This is our last NiE issue of the term and although it may seem early, I wish you a merry Christmas and happy new year.

Students asked to avoid greed

National Council for Higher Education Executive Director, Opuda-Asibo, has told the youth to tame their greed for power. Additionally, he said, they should temper down their love for money. "I want to congratulate you and to remind you to avoid drugs, corruption, theft, greed for money and the greed for power," Prof. Opuda-Asibo was speaking at Bugema University graduation.

Remember why you are in school

You always have to know the reason as to why you are in school so that what you do is meaningful and keeps you focused on your studies.

When you understand why you are at school, you will study hard to achieve your goals and this will lead to success in your exams and life.

Get to know the profession you want and put in a lot of effort in the subjects that are compulsory but keep in mind that the other subjects are equally important. Shamim Nabankema, a teacher at Kasozi Primary School, advises children who are looking out for their future dream profession to make use of all the facilities such as libraries, classrooms and staff rooms because that is where you can get the information you need.

She further says apart from the facilities, also form reading and discussion groups. In order for them to be efficient, use text books, question papers and class notes that are given to you.

"Also get close to teachers and your parents who will give you career guidance on what is best for you and what you need to do in order to achieve your dreams," says Nabankema.

Sometimes role models help inspire the children. Also looking up to them could give you the zeal to work hard so that you can be like them and get one for yourself.

More to that, she says children should not relax but read their books so that they can be able to answer the questions well in their examinations.

"While reading, make sure you find out your area of weakness so that you can put more effort in it and excel in all you subjects," says Farouk Kabugo, a teacher at Kyaliwajala Umea Primary School.

He advises children to stay away from peer pressure because this is a source of distraction and can make you forget about studying
